At Practical Action, we help people find solutions to some of the world’s toughest problems. Challenges increasingly made worse by catastrophic climate change.

The climate crisis cuts across everything we do: people living in poverty tend to be the most vulnerable to its impact. Meanwhile, COVID-19 has added significantly to the vulnerability of the world’s poorest, and progress towards gender equality isn’t happening fast enough: more women and girls live in extreme poverty than men and boys.

But together, we can shape a world that works better for everyone.

Everything we do is designed around the needs of the people we work with. Together, we work to change the systems that hold them back. We do things differently, working hand in hand with local communities; sharing knowledge and innovation with other change makers; creating bold collaborations with businesses and NGOs; and influencing policymakers and governments to ensure the voices of the most vulnerable are heard and solutions can be scaled up for maximum impact.

With your support, smallholder farmers can grow enough to feed their families and earn a decent living. People and businesses can withstand the effects of climate change and natural hazards. Those living in the most remote areas of the world have energy to power their homes, schools, clinics, businesses. And people living in urban slums and settlements have access to proper sanitation, waste services and clean water to keep their families healthy.

Together, we can take practical action to build brighter futures, free from poverty.

And we’d like to invite you to be part of it.
Our vision is for

A WORLD THAT WORKS BETTER FOR EVERYONE

In Bangladesh, farmers are defying floods caused by climate change by growing vegetables in innovative ‘floating gardens’.
Since becoming CEO in 2021, I’ve had the pleasure of meeting members of our Big Change Network. It has been a real source of motivation for me to see and hear their dedication to achieving our shared vision.

Members of the Network have a special role to play in transforming the small into something big, bringing generous financial support, ideas, networks, and expertise to help solve some of the world’s toughest problems and accelerate progress towards a better world.

Their ongoing commitment is instrumental, not only in helping us to develop, learn, and innovate, but also to plan and react with greater certainty in order that our programme delivery is even more impactful for communities. And it enables us to work really strategically to change the wider systems that keep people poor and vulnerable, unlocking a whole new level of possibility to deliver the big change the world so badly needs.

The Big Change Network brings together exceptional, like-minded people to do something extraordinary. I’m privileged to be involved in the Network and would like to extend a warm invitation for you to join me.

Sarah Roberts
CEO
Committed, long-term support from Big Change Network members allows us to extend further the quality, insight and evidence that underpins our approach.

Our teams work hand in hand with communities to develop ingenious, lasting and locally owned solutions to their biggest challenges. This approach needs specialist teams, with unparalleled subject expertise and deep local knowledge. The Big Change Network invests in our country teams, allowing them to create the conditions for unprecedented change to happen.

With nearly 60 years of experience, we’re delivering life-changing programmes of work in regenerative agriculture; urban water, sanitation and hygiene services; energy access and clean cooking; and climate resilience across Africa, South Asia and Latin America. The integrity and quality of our work is underpinned by membership of the International Aid Transparency Initiative (IATI), and we’re a 100% compliant supply partner for the Foreign, Commonwealth & Development Office (FCDO).

But we don’t just deliver on the ground. Our expert programme and consulting teams are able to conduct rigorous research to address the tough questions that hold the answers to the toughest problems. Questions such as gender, long term sustainability, environmental impact, market activation and supporting the most vulnerable and hardest to reach.

Together, we will find the answers
“My family are healthy now. Before, they used to suffer with fever and diarrhoea. This year, I produced 600 pumpkins. I bought a cow from my income and sell milk at the market. I can now afford a tutor for my children.”

Anwar Ul Islam
Rangpur, Bangladesh

Our work in Bangladesh has won two UN awards for innovation after transforming food production in the face of flooding and land loss.
Sharing knowledge of what works - and what doesn’t - is fundamental to how success at a local level can grow and multiply. It catalyses bigger changes – passing from community level to local authorities, national governments and global change makers.

In 2021-22, our work reached 4 million people through their families, community, or local partners; 11.6 million people through NGOs, governments and businesses who adopted our approaches, and over 16 million people in total.

Our specialist publishing division partners with the brightest minds to share the latest development perspectives, free and open access. We publish titles across 94% of the world’s countries, from practical ‘how to’ manuals to game changing research. We also publish industry standard manuals including the Sphere handbook, a sector blueprint for integrated approaches to humanitarian responses.

Our Practical Answers service provides technical information and can be accessed online or through an app in multiple languages, making our appropriate, small-scale solutions accessible to hundreds of thousands of knowledge seekers worldwide.

Our work has impact beyond the countries we have offices in. In 2021-22, through our digital knowledge resources, we helped 440,000 knowledge seekers around the world improve their skills.
Together, we can change the systems

Big Change Network members enable us to work in ways that go above and beyond the typical charity model, creating bold collaborations for bigger impact.

Since 1969, we’ve complemented our innovative community development work with a research and technical advisory consultancy. Combining original thinking, commercial acumen and non-profit values, our consulting team works with other change makers to help them deliver good development, good government and good business.

Our consultants provide in-depth insight and evidence that looks beyond the symptoms to uncover the root causes of an issue. Our Poor People’s Energy Outlook (PPEO) is a seminal report that is changing the way the world thinks about energy distribution and access. Our Managing our Waste (MoW) report uncovers the issues related to effective waste management delivery, in the context of poor peoples’ needs and the Sustainable Development Goals.

We collaborate with community members, companies, financial institutions and Governments to develop self-sustaining market systems based on local realities and capabilities. We don’t just deliver interventions – we help turn development into real world systems change.

Showiso, a smallholder farmer in Kenya, is using an innovative technique called Pfumvudza to boost her harvests and her income, despite climate change.

The Government of Zimbabwe are so impressed with the success of Pfumvudza they’re rolling it out to another 1.8 million farmers.

“It’s incredible to have opportunities to visit programmes around the world, seeing for myself the difference a modest amount of funds with the addition of some technical expertise can make. A trip like that restores optimism.”

Before her collaboration with Practical Action, Lourine Atieno planned to leave her home in rural Kenya to find work in the city. We worked with Lourine so she could learn the technical knowledge and business skills she needed to make a success of farming. Now, she’s growing food for her family and her community and helping revive the local economy.
“I certainly never feel discouraged. I can’t myself raise the winds that might blow us or this ship into a better world. But I can at least put up the sail so that when the wind comes, I can catch it.”
